Lead	I wrote a beginning in which I got the readers attention. 	I hooked my readers by explaining why the subject mattered, telling a surprising fact, or giving a big picture. I let the readers know that I would teach them different things about a subject. 	I wrote an introduction that helped readers get interested in and understand the subject. I let readers know the subtopics I would be developing later as well as the sequence. 	I wrote an introduction in which I interested readers, perhaps with a quote or significant fact. I let readers know the subtopics that I would develop later and how my text would unfold.
Transitions	I used words to show sequence such as before, after, then, and later. I also used words to show what didn't fit such as however and but. 	I used words in each section that help readers understand how one piece of information connected with others. If I wrote the section in sequence, I used words and phrases such as before, later, next, then, and after. If I organized the section in kinds or parts, I used words such as another, also, and for example.	When I wrote about results, I used words and phrases like consequently or as a result. When I compared information, I used words and phrases such as in contrast, in comparison, and especially. In narrative parts, I used phrases such as a little later. In sections that slated an opinion, I used words such as but, the most important reason, and	I used transitions to help readers understand how different bits of information and different parts of my writing fit together. I used transitions to help connect ideas, information, and examples, and to imply relationships such as when material exemplifies, adds on to, is similar to, explains, is a result of, or contrasts. I used transitions such as for instance, such as, similarly, therefore, as a result, in contrast to, and on the other hand.

For example Narrative: → a year later...
Ending	I wrote an ending that drew conclusions, asked questions, or suggested ways readers might respond.  Therefore... What is...? You will love...	I wrote an ending that reminded readers of my subject and may have suggested a follow-up action or left readers with a final insight. I added my thoughts, feelings, and questions about the subject at the end.  thoughts — insights — actions feelings — Ending — questions	I wrote a conclusion in which I restated the main points and may have offered a final thought or question for readers to consider.  Restate → End + ? or ?	I wrote a conclusion in which I restated the important ideas and offered a final insight or implication for the reader to consider.
Organization	I grouped my information into parts. Each part was mostly about one thing that connected my big topic. 	I grouped information into sections and used paragraphs and sometimes chapters to separate those sections. Each section had information that was mostly about the same thing. I may have used headings and subheadings.  subheadings → [The Conversion] ← heading What was discussed? What happened? ← paragraphs	I organized my writing into a sequence of separate sections. I may have used headings/subheadings to highlight separate sections. I wrote each section according to an organizational plan shaped partly by the genre.  Restate → End + ? or ?	I chose a focused subject. I used subheadings and/or clear introductory transitions to separate sections. I made deliberate choices about how to order sections and about the sequence of information and ideas within sections. I chose structures such as: compare/contrast, categories, claim/support to organize ideas. Some sections are written as argument, explanation, stories, or procedural passages.
